

Royal Wedding—A message of hope?

Around the world an estimated two billion people watched as Prince William married Catherine Middleton. Any wedding, whether royal or not, demonstrates optimism. Every wedding day is a symbol of hope and love. It was also a day of great national pride. Fortunately the rain held off and viewers were treated to the Royal Procession passing some of London's most famous landmarks.

The wedding was also a welcome relief from the security threats, financial meltdowns, job losses and the like that have dominated the news over recent times. I for one enjoyed seeing two people so obviously in love commit to one another in such beautiful surroundings. It has also been great fun looking at all the outfits worn by the guests. I hope you enjoyed the wedding and if not, enjoyed the extra day off many of us were lucky enough to receive.

Dear Friends

Come and Celebrate

My daughter celebrates her 40th at the end of May (yes, I 'm far too young!) and we are all going to enjoy celebrating with her as she is over from Australia for the whole month. If you have no special personal things to celebrate in June, here are some ideas:

Celebrate Smile Power Day on 15th June. Did you know that it 's easier to smile than to frown, as it uses fewer muscles?

Celebrate Camera Day on June 29th – an encouragement to record the moment. But not perhaps if it 's at the expense of experiencing and enjoying that moment.

Celebrate Best Friend Day on June 8th. Sadly, if you look up 'best friends ' in Google images, you 'II find either a man and his dog or two little girls. My best friend is a fellow human being whom I enjoy being with and sharing the realities of life – both the good and not-sogood.

Come and celebrate with All Saints on Sunday June 5th for a special service of Choral Evensong with readings from the King James Bible - in honour of the 400th anniversary of its publication. Some of
